SUMMER 1989

GOLD RUSH DAZE

This quadrennial event features fun 'n games and a wacky "faculty body" program

On March 28, all classes were cancelled to celebrate Gold Rush Daze, an event held only every four years.

The day started off with breakfast in bed (doughnuts, milk, and orange juice served by the faculty!) for all dormitory students. After chapel and lunch, the entire student body was divided into two teams, the red and the blue, for an afternoon of games on the athletic fields. The evening meal was served at the fields.

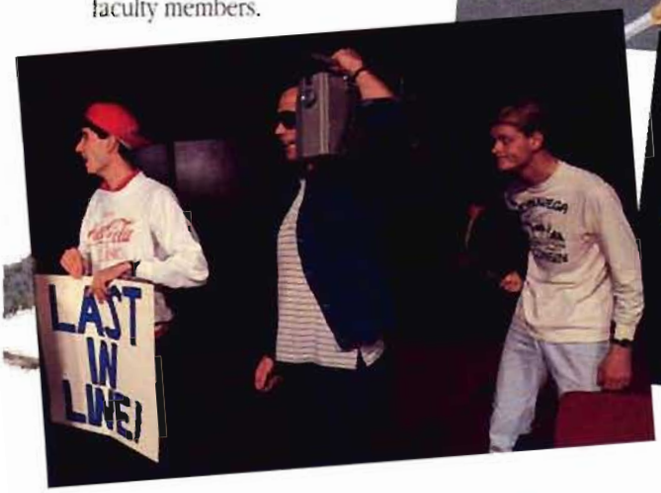
At 7 p.m. it was time for the faculty body program at the Founder's Memorial Amphitorium. Students enjoyed a variety of zany skits and music all prepared by faculty members.

Then it was back to the athletic fields for a singspiration, a challenge from God's Word, and fireworks.

"They should do it every year," said Judson Weniger, a sophomore from Lakeville, MN. "I think Dr. Bob III was right about it being one of the most exciting days of our college careers." ■



When Rhonda Paisley graduated from Bob Jones University with a degree in art, she expected to settle down in her native Belfast, Northern Ireland, and become a professional painter. Little did she know at the time the roles that God had in store for her: politician, author, and even "mother" to dozens of young punks and drug addicts.

As the daughter of Dr. Ian Paisley, an outspoken preacher and member of the British and European Parliaments, Rhonda found the atmosphere at BJU both different and exciting. She still recalls her first lecture at the university, because, after 13 years in a girls' preparatory school, it was her first coed class.

Dorm life was another new experience for Rhonda. She remembers spending much of her time clearing up misconceptions about her homeland. "I found myself at the other side of the Atlantic," she says, "sharing a room with girls who at first could hardly make sense of my accent and who were of the opinion that I

FROM PAINTING TO POLITICS

Rhonda Paisley's degree in art provided the springboard for many other endeavors in service to God and man had escaped from a country where you walked down the street ducking the bullets!" Once she got over the culture shock, Rhonda found life at BJU "thoroughly enjoyable, often packed with laughter despite the sheer hard work." Her four years in college gave her a deeper appreciation for her family and the home to which she would eventually return.

Rhonda's art training at BJU provided the springboard for a series of other endeavors. "After graduation," she recalls, "my first area of work was in freelance art in Belfast, using the proceeds to paint and exhibit my work. During those two years I came across many unemployed young people and began running art night classes for them in the rooms I used for a studio." Many of her students in these impromptu art classes were "punks" or "skin-heads," young people with no home and no hope, ravaged by the effects of drugs and alcohol.

In five years, Rhonda made 500 contacts with these young people whom many had considered unreachable. She even opened a drop-in center in downtown Belfast where they could come for help and counsel 24 hours a day. Although the work was difficult, she eventually saw 15 teen-agers accept Christ. "Slowly but surely," she says, "these babes are making progress and learning to lean upon Christ."

Her familiarity with the rough streets of South Belfast, where she did most of her work, led her to run for a city council seat from that part of town. She won the election handily, and went on to serve a term as Lady Mayoress of Belfast.

Her political involvement, however, has had unforeseen results on her youth work. Young people who once came to the center for help regardless of their political or religious leanings suddenly were warned not to associate with Rhonda's work. Attendance at the center plummeted from about 75 a week to just three to five per week.

"It was impossible to maintain the work at the level it had been," Rhonda recalls. "I felt it more realistic to close the center so that the contacts still desiring to meet could do so privately and without identification with the center."

Rhonda recently wrote a book, Ian Paisley, My Father, in which she gives her own totally frank view of the man so many people on both sides of the Atlantic misunderstand. In the book she also refers time and again to her own salvation and the spiritual lessons she's learned as the daughter of one of the United Kingdom's most famous citizens. The book quickly sold out its first hardcover printing and is now in its second edition.

"Since graduation, my work has veered off in directions that I never would have thought possible—nor for that matter, never really wanted, either," Rhonda says. "But it has all been challenging, interesting, different, and enjoyable for the most.

"As for my own career, I'm learning to be patient, and I am willing to go through whichever door God chooses to open." ■

THE HANDS ARE QUICKER THAN THE EAR

Although hampered by a hearing disability, Cathy Wolford is still actively involved in campus life!

Most 'normal' people think that deaf people live in their own little world—that life is not the same for us as it is for them," says Cathy Wolford, a sophomore prelaw major from North Belle Vernon, PA.

Because both of her parents are deaf, Cathy learned to sign before she learned to speak. "In fact," she says, "sign language was my first language. I had to take speech lessons until I was in the third grade so I could learn how to talk." She has a younger brother who is deaf, and an older brother whose hearing is normal.

For Cathy, life isn't much different from other people's. Although she will eventually become completely deaf, Cathy leads a typical, busy school life. "My teachers let me sit in the front of the class so I can lip-read, and my friends share their class notes with me to make sure I don't miss anything important." The University also installed an amplifier on her room phone so she could take calls as well.

"The people I work with at the Dining Common are extremely understanding, and they try to learn sign language so they can talk to me over the 'roar' of the dishwasher."

Although the work may be hard, Cathy still manages to have fun. "The kids try not to spray me with the water hose, but, you know, 'accidents' happen," she laughs.

Cathy heard about BJU from her pastor, Donald Schnarr of First Baptist Church, and decided to apply because she wanted a good prelaw education. "I feel that the Lord is calling me to be a lawyer for the deaf, and that's what I'm training for." She adds, "I was impressed with BJU from the start because they always answered my letters promptly and even sent me a poster and a tape." She visited the campus last summer and was even more impressed by all that BJU had to offer.

After receiving her undergraduate degree here, Cathy wants to go on to law school and perhaps after that the National Law Center for the Deaf in Washington, D.C. "I'm praying I don't lose my hearing completely until after I'm done with law school," she says.

"It's not impossible to be hearing impaired and still live a full life," Cathy says. "It's very easy for me to be involved in regular campus life." And she is involved. She recently performed in a student-written and -produced play about and for the deaf. She also plays volleyball, basketball, and softball for her society, works 15 to 20 hours a week in the Dining Common, and goes on an extension geared toward involving more deaf kids in their youth groups.

"All you have to do is determine to give your best and not let your problems get you down," Cathy says. "For me, college is a lot of fun because I decided when I came that I was going to get the most out of it that I could." ■

PROJECT HEART AND HAMMER

Run-down housing in Greenville received a "face-lift" last semester thanks to the city and BJU. Students volunteered the manpower while the city supplied the money. The project included roof repair, yard work, tree trimming and removal, minor concrete work, painting, putting up doors, and replacing windows. Carpentry majors handled the technical work with about 50 other students, faculty, and staff helping out. The workers renovated four houses in four Saturdays. The favorable response of the community was encouraging and the students gained valuable experience as well. ■

STUDENTS ATTEND SHOW

Graphic design students and faculty recently attended the Graphics Arts '89 exposition in Charlotte, NC, billed as the "greatest graphic arts show in the South." Over 250 exhibits were displayed on two floors of the Charlotte Civic Center. The students had a chance to get a close-up look at the latest equipment—and come back with armloads of paper samples, printing samples, and posters. ■

FACULTY MEMBER ELECTED

Dr. Ron Horton, chairman of BJU's division of English language and literature, was recently elected president of the South Carolina Association of Departments of English. Dr. Horton was elected by representatives of the association's 22 colleges and universities. ■

CHILDREN OFF TO DISNEY WORLD WITH HELP FROM BJU

Fifteen children from the Lullwater Homes housing project headed to Walt Disney World in Florida, thanks to BJU. The children are part of the Lullwater Drug Stompers, a "Just Say No" club organized by Bertha Epps, a former resident of the housing project. Mrs. Epps was having trouble raising enough money for the trip, so she called Dr. Bob III to ask for help. In response, he provided a University van to transport the young people and arranged free fund-raising time on WMUU-FM. The station not only raised the $4000 Mrs. Epps needed for the trip, but also an additional $1128 for the Greenville Families in Action, which coordinates the Just Say No clubs. ■

NEW SAS DEAN

John Luck, special events coordinator for the University, has been named dean of the School of Applied Studies. John, who earned his bachelor's and master's degrees at BJU, is also a doctoral candidate in the School of Religion. He will assume his new responsibilities beginning with the fall semester. ■

SPECIAL NOTE:

The play Flowers for Algernon, mentioned in a recent description of Division of Speech activities, is different in content and author from the book Flowers for Algernon. The book is not acceptable for Bible-believing Christians and would not be used at the University. We regret the confusion this created for some of our readers and appreciate your inquiries. ■

VISIT BJU THIS SUMMER! A Camp for Everyone!

Summer at Bob Jones University brings a full range of camps from a general family vacation to highly specialized, skill-development sessions for youth. Each camp program is conducted by experienced, competent instructors and concerned, qualified counselors.

June 5–August 4
Basketball, Volleyball, and Soccer Camps allow students to learn skills and build confidence, emphasizing the importance of Christian sportsmanship.

June 18–23
Nursing Camp provides young women with information about and exposure to the profession of nursing.

July 1–8
Peace-Full Vacation is the camping experience for everybody! Families and singles experience a wide range of recreational activities and valuable seminars.

July 17–21
Speech Camp offers wide variety, including private lessons, debate clinics, and a play presented at the end of the week.

July 17–21
Music Camp gives the student intensive training, individualized instruction, and participation in a concert with the Symphony Orchestra and Camp Chorus.

Campers have access to the University athletic facilities, including tennis courts, game fields, gym, and swimming pool. Use Review's convenient response card or call (803) 242–5100, extension 3120, for brochures and further details. ■

Sword Conference Returns to BJU

For the third consecutive year, the Sword of the Lord National Conference on Revival and Soul Winning will be held on the BJU campus. The Conference, to be held July 10–14, brings thousands of people from all over the United States and many foreign countries to participate in seminars, to hear sermons from well-known pastors and evangelists, and to see the many exhibits. On-campus accommodations are available. If you're interested in attending this year's Sword Conference, call (803) 242–5100, ext. 4220, or (615) 893–6700 for more information. ■

STUDENT AWARDS

Joel Davis, a senior math major, and Stig Thormodsrud, a senior computer science major, received a $2000 stipend from the National Science Foundation for their computer research.

Dan Steenson of Burton, MI, was the first-place winner in piano in the South Atlantic District Divisional Auditions of the National Federation of Music Clubs. The South Atlantic District is a nine-state region stretching from Virginia to Mississippi. ■

FASHION SHOW STAGED

Thirty home ec students modeled some 65 garments they had sewn at the first-ever BJU fashion show, staged by the home ec department. Classroom attire, Sunday and professional dress, and wedding and casual attire were featured. ■

FACULTY MEMBER WINS FELLOWSHIP

Dr. Janie McCauley was awarded a National Endowment for the Humanities grant for a post-doctoral fellowship to Princeton this summer to attend a seminar on Edmund Spenser's Faerie Queene. ■

THE PRESIDENT'S CORNER

If a student graduates from college and takes with him no better character than he brought, he has been cheated. The lives of freshmen are in the balances when they enroll. What happens during the immediate future usually determines their lifelong future. The following happy letter from the wife of a graduate will delight your soul as it did mine.

"My husband and I are recent graduates of BJU. My husband is a tax accountant with Arthur Andersen & Co., and I am attending a medical school.

"I have been wanting to write this letter for some time but did not know what to say. I'll start at the beginning. When my husband came to BJU as a freshman, he had never seen the school before and was your typical high school student from Miami. To him, BJU was indeed a type of culture shock! When in high school, he was a big man on campus; but when he got to Bob Jones, he was just another face in the crowd. He had very little regard for spiritual things; and in the midst of this, his father passed away. This only made him more rebellious and homesick. This all continued to the end of his freshman year. He and a lot of his "friends" got into trouble during the summer. It was then he realized that all the rules, all the things he had heard from his hall leader, all the things he had heard in chapel were true.

"When he entered his sophomore year, he was on spiritual probation, which he agrees was the factor that helped the most in carrying out this new determination to live for the Lord. My husband also agrees that it was the consistent caring and concern for his spiritual development and character that made him want to change and to realize what he needed to be.

"Since graduation, we have moved and found a great church with a pastor who is a Bob Jones graduate. My husband has become a great leader in the church.

"Dr. Bob, I am really saying all this to tell you that I was privileged to watch a caring faculty shape and mold a rebellious freshman into an honor graduate who loved the Lord and is being a great testimony at work, (and also a husband who loves his wife). We both could never repay you for keeping the school strong and sticking to the old-fashioned values, and, most important, teaching us something that is indispensible—CHARACTER!

"I cannot tell you how many times teachers at my medical school have asked me where I went to school because I am so well prepared and different from the rest of the students. It is times like that when you know BJU is more than a college; it is a wonderful tool the Lord uses in shaping the rest of your life."

If students entering the University were already all that they could be, they wouldn't need to come. Those who have a need and desire to be more will not be disappointed at BJU. ■

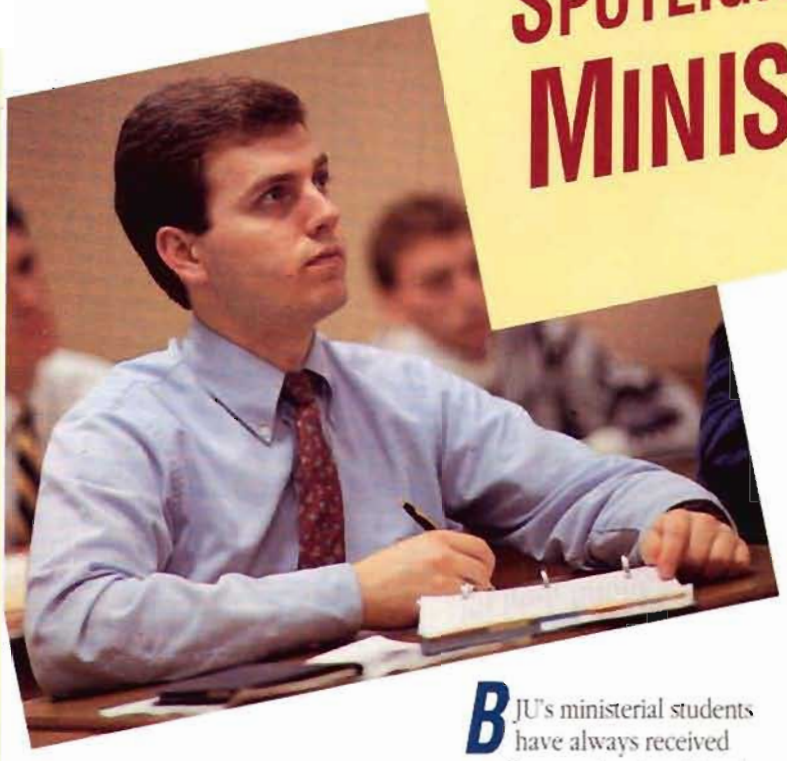
SPOTLIGHT ON MINISTERIAL TRAINING



BJU's ministerial students have always received excellent academic training in Bible, ancient languages, and homiletics, as well as practical training in every phase of the gospel ministry. In our commitment to provide the best preacher training possible, we are making some exciting changes in the ministerial program.

The "Preacher and His Ministry" course will now meet three days a week instead of two. This course is designed to teach and improve ministry skills. Ministerial students will receive manuals containing course notes that will be valuable references for years to come.

The ministerial class will also benefit from the practical experience of 24 outstanding preachers from across the nation (see box). Individual ministerial students will have the opportunity to meet these preachers personally and seek insight about personal questions.

In addition to the expertise of these visiting preachers, the ministerial class will benefit from the teaching of the full-time school of religion faculty, which has over 400 years of combined experience—an average of about 20 years per teacher!

There is no greater need in the world today than the need for caring, knowledgeable, and forceful preachers of the Word of God. For this reason, BJU has always put a strong emphasis on training preachers. More fundamental preachers and Christian workers have been trained here over the past 60 years than at any other college in America.

Bob Jones University has continued to heed the founder's admonition to "keep the chapel platform hot" by regularly bringing to the campus some of the best preachers in the world. Our desire is to keep on turning out preachers who "rightly divide the word of truth" and are zealous to win souls for the Lord Jesus Christ. ■

THE TOOLS AND THE TRADE

A nuts-and-bolts lab where students can create their own resources!

About 170 education seniors per year go to the Principals' Conference to look for positions. About 185 Christian school administrators from 35 states are there looking for faculty. The School of Education is the University's second largest school, but it still can't keep up with the demand. There are four times as many requests for BJU-trained teachers as the University has to recommend!

What are the secrets of such success? An outstanding faculty, certainly, and a thorough, exacting curriculum with a time-proven achievement record. But an aspect often overlooked is the role of extensive facilities that allow students to get practical experience. Education students, especially, need a place to turn their own creative ideas into things their students can see and touch. That's what the BJU Media Center is all about.

No other four rooms on campus could claim such diversity—or such potential. This is a one-stop educational resource, giving students tools to create graphic classroom aids and find information and new ideas.

"As students' training increases, so does their awareness of the Media Center's value," says Mrs. Bonnie Watson, the Media Center Supervisor. "Education major or not, any student can do class or personal work here. Education students are building a resource library they'll use the rest of their teaching years. Again and again graduates tell us how much they rely on materials they made in the Media Center."

During the summer teacher seminars—New Beginnings and Christian School Management—the Media Center is packed. "It's a time of peak demand," Bonnie says. "The teachers try to do a year's worth of projects in a week."

The Media Center offers many options for making bulletin boards, handouts, fliers, four-color computerized transparencies, copies, and banners—even for making slides from pictures in a book. A die-cut machine punches out various paper forms ranging from lettering and symbols to flags and teddy bears. Another device runs different letter fonts and sizes onto clear tape for transparencies.

Next is a stock of references: books on various educational fields, special educational periodicals, teaching seminars on videocassettes, sound effects for presentations, and a computer cross-referenced NICEM index listing hundreds of places for students to find nearly any teaching tool. The Center is a concentration of resources that will help the students produce their own resources.

The equipment room has rows of projectors—16mm, slide, opaque, and overhead—VCRs, cassette players, reel-to-reel players, video units, a computerized grader for multiple-choice tests, and the copy stand for making slides from photographs. "There's a 35" monitor down in room 210. That's for large-group presentations, of course," Bonnie says. There's also a computer which students often get to use to evaluate software for educational methods classes. Education students must be proficient with all the equipment.

Last is the textbook room, lined with elementary and secondary texts, the complete curriculum published by BJU Press, and a sample copy of every state-adopted, approved text used in South Carolina. The latter is one of the features that makes the BJU education program NASDTEC certified, meaning graduates can be certified for teaching in the state of South Carolina and 22 other states.

"We base our program on our belief that the teacher is the key," says Dr. Walter Fremont, dean of the School of Education. "Too many educational problems stem from a lack of training for the teachers!"

The Media Center plays a major role in preparing students to be those "keys" in future classrooms. Here are the facilities to move from abstract concepts to concrete presentations. Students are limited only by their imaginations! ■

College Financing Tips

by Roy Barton
Director of Financial Affairs

In past columns I have mentioned several methods of saving for college, as well as books for finding various sources of financial aid. Following is a list of sources found in the Spring 1989 issue of the Whole Nonprofit Catalog which should be helpful in the areas of financial planning and finding student aid. I have not been able to check all the books myself, but one or more of them may be found in your local library, or you may be able to order them from the publisher.

The College Cost Book, 1987–88. College Scholarship Service. New York, NY: College Board, 1985. vii, 244 p. (888 Seventh Ave., 10106) $10.95
Explains how college financial planning can be done in advance and how to estimate your need and eligibility for financial aid.

How to Find Out about Financial Aid: A Guide to Over 700 Directories Listing Scholarships, Fellowships, Loans, Grants, Awards, and Internships. Gail Ann Schlachter. San Carlos, CA: Reference Service Press, 1987. 334 p. (1100 Industrial Rd., Suite 9, 94070) $32.50
Identifies, classifies, describes, evaluates, and compares the more than 700 print and on-line directories that provide current information on financial aid opportunities.

Financial Aids for Higher Education Catalog: A Catalog for Undergraduates. 13th ed. Oreon Keesler. Dubuque, IA: William C. Brown Company Publishers, 1987. 758 p. (2460 Kerper Blvd., 52001) $36.95
Lists programs intended for both college freshmen and advanced students. Index includes donor agencies and foundations, common program names, subject areas, types of awards, and special eligibility characteristics. Updated every two years.

Complete Grants Sourcebook for Higher Education. 2nd ed. American Council on Education. New York, NY: Macmillan Publishing Co., 1985. 608 p. (866 Third Ave., New York, NY 10022) $85.00
A guide to grantsmanship and a directory to more than 500 funding sources for higher education.

The College Blue Book: Vol. 5: Scholarships, fellowships, grants, and loans. 21st ed. New York, NY: Macmillan Information, 1987. xv, 718 p. (866 Third Ave., New York, NY 10022) $46.00
Lists financial aid programs offered by agencies and institutions, excluding colleges and universities. Individual programs listed by grant-making organization and arranged under broad and specific subject areas.

Arco's Financial Aid Annual. John Schwartz. New York, NY: Arco Publishing, Inc., 1987. 608 p. (215 Park Ave. South, 10003) $14.95

Bear's Guide to Finding Money for College. John Bear. Berkeley, CA: Ten Speed Press, 1984. vii, 157 p. (P. O. Box 7123, 94707) $5.95

The Dow Jones-Irwin Guide to College Financial Planning. Paul M. Lane. Homewood, IL: Dow Jones-Irwin, 1981.
Out of print but available in libraries.

Financing a college education isn't easy. Although it requires careful planning, hard work, and faith in the Lord's provision, it can be done. If we can be of any further help to you, please don't hesitate to write or call. ■

1990 World Congress of Fundamentalists

London

July 16-20, 1990

Christians who stand for the infallibility of the Bible and obedience to the Scriptures will gather from all parts of the world for the 1990 World Congress of Fundamentalists, meeting in Westminster Central Hall, London, July 16-20, 1990. Vital subjects touching on evangelism, Christian witness, and defense of the faith will help to equip God's people for the final decade of the apostate 20th century and prepare them, if the Lord tarries, to meet the challenges of the 21st century. Preachers from various parts of the globe will challenge hearts with messages from the Word of God.

As the conference approaches, the congress offices in the United States and abroad will assist in arranging travel and accommodations as requested by participants.
